FIVE CHILDREN BITTEN BY A MAD DOG.

A large rabbit hound with all the symptoms of rabies bit five children in the Twelfth Ward of Newark on Friday afternoon, and caused the utmost excitement and consternation in the neighborhood. The dog made his appearance in Ferry-st., shortly after 3 o'clock when children were returning home from school. The dog was entirely unknown in the neighborhood. As a heavy set of children were passing along and foaming at the mouth, and began biting right and left. The terror-stricken children ran for their lives, falling over one another in their flight. The rabid beast pursued, biting first one and then another. The onrushing of the children soon drew a crowd of men and boys, and stones and clubs were collected for missiles.

Forced by the exciting crowd the dog turned and ran up Ferry-st. to Jackson-st., pursued at a distance by the crowd hurling missiles at him. Turning into Jackson-st. he dashed along, snapping his teeth viciously. Warned by the commotion, wayfarers hastily dashed into houses. Several police officers had meanwhile joined in the chase and preceded the crowd. At Market st. a party of boys headed off the brute and delivered a volley of stones that brought him to a halt. This enabled the policemen to overtake him, and they promptly emptied their revolvers into his body. Justice Albrecht held him for further examination.

twelve years old, of No. 85 Ann-st., was bitten on the leg. The wounds of the children were cauterized. A boy, 12 years old, who was bitten on the foot, could not tell them could not tell them what the dog was mad as he exhibited every symptom of the rabies, other dogs whom he encountered in the street fed from him. It was inferred that as the child was bitten, the shock should be sent to Dr. Gilster for treatment.

It was in this neighborhood that five children were bitten by a dog supposed to be mad, and the children attacked the children without any warning. The little sufferers were sent for treatment to Pasteur in Paris. All of them are alive and well to-day.

DID HE TOR THE DEAD HOSTLER?

James Lawler died last October in the stable of S. V. Lary, president of Lary's Express Company, in Hoboken-avenue. Lawler was a hussar, who had been connected with the company for thirty years. When he died it was believed that he had saved considerable money, but after his death could not be found.

The surveyors were instructed to run their lines through Avenue A, which was open from the Morris Canal to the Hill-wood Rail-road. People wanted the road to run through Avenue B, which is not fully opened, but against it is the fact that the cost would be $30,000 more. Bayonne taxpayers, who must pay the same rate of taxes as others in the county, voted to have an open avenue apportioned in Bayonne, while in Hoboken the road is an entire cut-off.

When questioned, Mrs. Lary declared she had lived with her for nine years as her wife. She said that her husband died and that the last place of his abode was Hoboken.

The money she said was owned by her husband.

In her presence by her attorney he committed the theft. Justice Albrecht held her for further examination.

DAYTON—several squads of surveyors began preliminary operations in Bayonne yesterday on the new Hudson County boulevard. The road will run through the entire length of the city, a distance of three and one-half miles. Contrary to the original program, the surveyors were instructed to run their lines through Avenue A, which was open from the Morris Canal to the Hill-wood Rail-road. People wanted the road to run through Avenue B, which is not fully opened, but against it is the fact that the cost would be $30,000 more. Bayonne taxpayers, who must pay the same rate of taxes as others in the county, voted to have an open avenue apportioned in Bayonne, while in Hoboken the road is an entire cut-off.

PLAINFIELD.—Although the Plainfield municipal authorities have advertised for proposals for the erection of a system of waterworks, the Public Works Council has passed an ordinance forbidding the Plainfield Water Supply Company to lay water-pipes through the city, which it will begin laying April 1. The company claims to have its privilege under an act not passed by the State Legislature in 1860. Its officers are in no way disconcerted by the refusal of the Plainfield Common Council thus far to recognize its claims.
